Notwithstanding the inclement weather on Sunday morning Mr. Venable was listened to by quite a large congregation of interested hearers. His sermon was on prayer. The reverend gentleman said: And He spake a parable unto them, saying "that man ought always to pray." The Savior here using the ruling market prices, and the difference between the market prices and those paid has been allowed to Pitney by the parties he purchased from in the way of goods for his own use.

ONE CABINET-MAKER NAMED FRAZIER, who is regularly employed under Pitney, testifies that nearly, if not all of his time for several years, has been consumed in doing work for outside parties instead of the work of the government; that he spent one month of the government; that he spent one month of the pyroceanite exhibition the military were escorted into the Exposition building. fie i. Did the Lord remove it? No; but he said: "My grace is sufficient for thee. It may be a sacrifice, but it is a thorn I have given thee to bring thy heart under subje tion." God just said, "My grace is suffici-ent." That our Savior and the apostle Paul bowed to the decrees of God's will, and at the same time failed to get what the asked for seems almost paradoxical. Takin another parable, He said the Pharisees an the publicans by the went up in the temple to pray; the Pharis e thought himself bett other people, and prayed: "I than of all I possess and fart twice a week s fellow; and to close up he says: thank Thee that I am not like this poor humble publican. The publican does not even raise his eyes heaven-ward, but smites his breast and ward, but smites his breast and says, "Lord, be merciful to me a sinner," and He said this man went down to his house astified rather than the other. He did not ay, "God, elevate this poor fallen humanity;" he did not say, "Purify my heart;" he did not say, "God, justify me." No; but he said, "Lord, have mercy upon me, a poor, sinful wretch"—in the original language "have mercy on the sinner, the chiefest sin
